Gentlepersons,

How can we say over $1 billion for disadvantaged public schools is not in the best interest of consumers and the public? Clearly, one of the major reasons why computer usage has grown to what it is today is because of Microsoft products, despite what their competition has to say. Disadvantaged youth is the untapped reserve for even greater household computer usage. And let's face it: These kids have a much greater chance of success in the workplace if they know how to use computers and popular Microsoft software. If disadvantaged kids don't get this knowledge in school, chances are they won't get it at all.

Do what's in the best interest of the consuming public. Settle this case and let's move forward!
